No trace of two girls, student

By JAMES MAFENA

THERE WAS NO TRACE yesterday of the two American girls and an African student allegedly taken from a Soweto house on Sunday morning by three White plainclothes policemen.

Majoor A. L. de Klerk, commander of the Moroka Police Station said yesterday he had heard nothing about them.

"They were not arrested by any of my men and I have received no report about them," said Maj. De Klerk, in whose area the three were allegedly arrested.

The name of one of the girls is believed to be Deborah Marcus, an artist, and the other girl is known only as Judith. She is a sociologist. The African student taken with the girls is Mr. Sidom Sidelwane, also known as Tlatsane.

His brother, Mr. Bernard

Tlatsane, said yesterday that one of the plainclothes policemen had told him that the family should not look for Mr. Sidelwane. They would hear from the police about him.

The policemen had said that there would be no bail for Mr. Sidelwane.

Mr. Sidelwane's aunt, Miss Leah Tlatsane, said the first time the family had seen the American girls was on Sunday morning.

She was preparing tea for the girls and their friends when the policemen arrived and took the names and addresses of about six people in the house.

Mr. Monamudi was not at work or at home. He is an actor. Yesterday one of the directors of a play in which Mr. Monamudi is involved, said he had not seen him for a number of days.

On Sunday, plainclothes policemen also called at his Rockville home looking for him, but he was not there.

Mr. Sidelwane was a friend of Mr. Monamudi. They were friends of the British photographer.

Yesterday Mr. Sidelwane's family said they did not know whether to look for him or not, in view of what the policemen had said.

On Sunday night, General Gideon Joubert, commissioner of police, said the girls had not been arrested by the Security Police. He said they might have been arrested for being in Soweto illegally, but could not confirm this.

NAMES

An official of the United States Consulate-General said yesterday that the consulate had not been contacted officially in connection with the case.

Another man who could not be traced yesterday was Mr. Boonin Monamudi, who was questioned and released, after visiting the Pritchard Street studio of the two British photographers Quentin and Henry Jacobson. The two were arrested last week and are still in detention.

First TV training contract goes out

Staff Reporter

THE FIRST step in training engineers in television transmission techniques was taken yesterday when the SABC announced that Marconi South Africa Ltd. had been awarded a contract to conduct two 10-day courses in techniques.

Each course will instruct 20 engineers.

The first course will start next March, when two specialists from Marconi's instrument division in London will arrive to give SABC engineers instruction in modern colour television broadcasting systems and colour transmission measurement, an essential skill required to ensure quality transmissions.

Meanwhile, the corporation's board of control has agreed to buy two TV transmitters which will be used as simulators similar in concept to aircraft training simulators which acoustical pilots to new aircraft.

Technicians will do their basic training on these simulators, possibly even taking them apart and putting them together again.

The transmitters will also be used to test TV reception in various parts of the Republic and to enable technicians to determine which areas required booster transmitters.

No to Nusas

Own Correspondent

CAPE TOWN — The National Union of South African Students has been refused the use of an Anglican retreat at Faure for its integrated annual seminar in December, according to the weekly Nusas newsletter.

The refusal has come from the Rev. F. S. Stanage, and has, according to the newsletter, been enforced by the Archbishop of Cape Town, the Most Rev. Robert Selby Taylor.

The president of Nusas, Mr. Neval Curtis, said he could not understand why the Anglican Church should have refused to offer assistance to Nusas.
